CITY ASKS FOR PUBLIC COMMENT ON PURCHASE OF PARCEL 1 LAND

by Al Skolnik

A public hearing will be held on Monday, August 5, to consider various proposals for city acquisition of land in parcels 1 and 2 (the land between the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. property and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway). Under the terms of the donation by the Federal Government of 14 acres of surplus Agricultural Research Center land east of parcel 1, the city has to augment the 14 acres with another 15-acre purchase of adjacent land as well as develop a park plan.

The city council, after receiving the conflicting advice of the city's Advisory Planning Board and the Park and Recreation Advisory Board, has developed a proposal for acquiring a strip of land along the northern boundary of the city connecting Laurel Hill Road to the recently acquired surplus land and a second strip of land along the eastern edge boundary of the city connecting the surplus land to the Board of Education property adjacent to the landfill. These lands amount to 28 acres. In addition, the council has proposed acquiring four acres on the south side of Hamilton Place (in parcel 2) opposite the GHI administration offices.

The APB and PRAB, while concurring with the parcel 2 purchase, have some reservations about the parcel 1 council recommendations. As a result, city council at its regular Monday night meeting on July 8 decided to hold a public hearing to get citizen input.

The APB in its Report #135 originally had recommended acquisition of a 30-acre strip extending from the northern city limits to the Board of Education property in the south, along the eastern border of parcel 1 for use as a wilderness park. The bulk of such an acquisition would be a stream valley and flood plain. In its subsequent Report #148, it considered the council proposal an acceptable alternative but questioned its economic and personal benefits in view of the fact that acquisition of the flood plain acreage would probably be cheaper.

The council has generally held that there is not much to be gained by acquisition of flood plain land since such land, regardless of who owned it, would have to stay in an undeveloped form.

PRAB, while agreeing with the undesirability of acquiring flood plain land, opposed in Report #11-74 the acquisition of a strip of land along the north side of parcel 1, noting that the Research Center property adjacent to parcel 1 is not to be declared surplus and thus will continue to serve as a buffer. Instead, PRAB recommended the acquisition of 15 acres north of the city landfill and adjacent to the surplus land donation to meet the city's requirements for use as a neighborhood park. They also recommended that this acreage not include any of the Board of Education's land that lies north of the landfill.

In a related matter, council authorized the city manager to apply to the Federal Government for donation of 2+ surplus acres located on the city side of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad tracks near the Springhill Lake industrial tract and the Capital Beltway. The city would be required to maintain the property.

Other land development matters occupying the council's attention concerned the application of Springhill Lake owners for a permit to fill flood plain land and a preliminary plan for locating a Pepco substation on the Golden Triangle.

Waterway Permit
The Water Resources Administration had requested Springhill Lake to apply for the permit because of confusion over whether the filling that had been done to date was in accordance with State regulations. The permit, a hearing on which was scheduled for July 9, would allow completion of fill within the flood plain of Indian Creek. The land fill is needed for preparation of a right-of-way into the SHL industrial tract.

The city council, in recommending approval of the permit, stipulated four conditions:

(1) that a certified final delineation of the flood plain be made.

(2) that no more fill be added to the flood plain other than the 3,500 cubic yards.

(3) that there be adequate sediment control and runoff detention.

(4) that there be adequate screening and landscaping along the SHL industrial right-of-way.

Pepco Sub-station

The council's reaction was negative to a request by the developer of the Golden Triangle for location of a Pepco sub-station on a one-half acre lot in the southeast corner of the parcel adjacent to Greenbelt Road and the Capital Beltway. The council notified the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission that it recommended denial because this would constitute piecemeal development of one of the most important vacant tracts of land within the county. Council felt that it could not comment intelligently on Pepco plans for a fully enclosed sub-station building unless it knew what else was going up on the tract and whether these uses would be compatible. Questions were also raised as to the disposition of the present Pepco substation on Crescent Road.

Air Bubble for Tennis

The council was intrigued by a proposal received from Richard Stevenson, former Greenbelt director of Recreation, for the operation of an air bubble over four of the tennis courts so that these courts may be utilized throughout the winter. The courts would be available on a fee basis with the city receiving a certain proportion of the proceeds. Stevenson also proposed to operate a pro-shop on a concession basis.

Council referred the proposal to PRAB with a request that it report back its findings by the next regular meeting of the council on Monday, August 12.

Choral Group

Following the recommendation of PRAB, council authorized the expenditure of $400 to support a choral group. The group will be under the direction of Douglas Freeman, who is seeking participation by about 60 persons.

Federal Aid

Council decided to take advantage of the new extension of the Public Employment Program (PEP) by Congress, to employ two more persons with Federal funds. One will be a police officer and the other a receptionist-secretary in the city offices. In making these employments, the city must agree to absorb these persons as regular employees by March 31,

NASA Studying Favorable EIS Decision on Greenbriar Plant

by Elaine Skolnik

According to informed sources, a favorable Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) regarding the Greenbriar sewage treatment plant is in the hands of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) officials in Washington. It appears that officials at NASA in Greenbelt are sticking with their original findings that "upon the developers obtaining an EPA permit, the easement can be granted." This conclusion was reached in the draft EIS released in February 1974, reaffirmation of which will permit the piping of treated sewage effluent from the Greenbriar plant for a distance of 150 feet across NASA property to a discharge point on an unnamed tributary of Beaver Dam Creek, also on NASA property.

It is expected that a decision will soon be coming out of NASA's Washington headquarters, after which the EIS will be sent to the Federal Council on Environmental Quality for publication in the Federal Register. The record will be open for 30 days for comment.

Sees No Dangers

A NASA spokesman in Greenbelt said: "It was our carefully considered opinion that if the appropriate environmental agencies determined that there would be no harm to the environment and, if our consultant and our investigation indicated that there would be no harm, then we could not deny them an easement."

State permits for construction of the treatment plant and discharge of effluent have been approved and issued. However, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has been unwilling to make a decision to grant a permit until NASA acts. NASA has long maintained that it is a non-technical agency lacking expertise in the area of treatment plants and must look toward EPA for guidance and decision-making.

To help meet this deficiency, NASA hired a consultant to assist its staff in the preparation of the February draft statement, which concluded that the effluent appeared to meet all applicable Federal, State and local standards, and was expected to have no significant impact on the stream.

NASA officials said that since the May EPA hearing in Greenbelt, they have reviewed the draft statement, taking into consideration many comments and objections raised by interested persons, organizations, and governmental bodies. Carroll Dicus of NASA in Greenbelt said "We are trying to be responsive to what's right . . . we have tried to be forthright, and a tremendous amount of time and hard work by many was put into this project."

NASA is also asking that Greenbriar developers provide a bond to cover such things as planting trees along the fence line.

Testing Continues

In the meantime, testing of the Greenbriar temporary sewage treatment plant, which will serve the 1,193-unit condominium development, continues. Testing of the plant using clear water and activated sludge have been accomplished, and raw sewage is now being hauled in from the Parkway Plant. Greenbriar consultant Dr. John Cookson, who is directing the shakedown operation, is now evaluating the tests taken on the activated sludge which was used to seed the plant. The activated sludge contains the bacterial colony ("bugs") that will digest and degrade the raw sewage into gases, inorganic ions and water.

It is expected that the testing period using raw sewage will take about two weeks. Raw sewage is now being run through the plant processes, treated, taken to the lowest point in the plant for recycling in the surge tanks, and finally hauled back to the plant.

Recreation Building

In a related matter, Greenbriar developers have informed the city that because of a newly imposed lending requirement, the leasing arrangements of the community building and recreation facilities to condominium owners will be eliminated. Greenbriar developer Alan Kay told the News Review that the recreation amenities will be owned by the purchasers.

The city was also informed that as soon as revisions are made, a complete set of condominium documents will be furnished to council.

Call Police, Help The Kids

To the Editor:

Do you know? Greenbelt is a nice place to live. Twenty years ago I lived here and it was O.K. even then.

But do you know what makes a good town look bad? It's these very few people who just won't leave other people's property alone. Want to help this town stay good? Here's one way: whenever you see a kid messing around with someone's property, and you aren't sure if that kid owns that property, get on that phone and call the cops. Now this isn't as bad as you think. I'm no cop, but we have been downing our police in this country for too long. Your local cop wants to help you, so let's help him/her to do a good job.

Lots of times it's just a matter of bringing an errant kid to the parents and letting them handle it from there. And later, that same kid may thank you someday for keeping him/her from a police record.

The reason I am writing this letter is our car was covered with mud by kids in our apartment complex here in Greenbelt. And it was in broad daylight. We never did anything to those kids to deserve this treatment. We like kids, we like our town.

From Ex "Miss Greenbelt"

To the Editor:

In regard to the letter titled "Her Own Worst Enemy" in the July 3, 1974 News Review. I for one am sick and tired of hearing about Women's Liberation. I am a woman, not a man. I look like a woman, not a man; I want to be treated like a woman, not a man.

I am a former "Miss Greenbelt" and I am very proud of it. I don't consider myself a lesser creature due to the fact that I am a wife and an eventual candidate for motherhood.

The Miss Greenbelt Contest is, in no way, a violation of anyone's constitutional rights. No girl is being forced to participate in the competition, nor is anyone being forced to attend the program.

Some of us still believe that beauty is an attribute to some as intelligence is to others. As far as the modeling scholarship goes, some girls who excel in beauty, would love to be a model, or even a chance to be one. This scholarship may be the door to a career many girls dream of. It is the same as if one who excels in science wants very badly to go to college and try to attain a career as a scientist. In essence, no one has the right to condemn any one person's goals or priorities in this life.

"Girls Pretty; Boys Aren't"

To the Editor:

In her letter excoriating the sponsors of the Miss Greenbelt pageant (News Review, July 3), Katherine Keene crashes strident dogma through a new dimension of fallacious reasoning.

Using a hackneyed, doctrinaire rhetoric, Miss Keene propounds a series of specious premises and conclusions that should not go unchallenged. First, she denies any merit to the qualities for which Miss Greenbelt is selected. Do not grace, poise, tact, self-confidence and — yes — beauty play an important role in social interaction, specifically the pursuit of success? When her future Madame Curie ascend the dais to accept their Nobel prizes, how would Miss Keene have them appear? Presumably T-shirted and braless, heavy-footed and glowering, for femininity would have been abandoned as somehow "demeaning" to womanhood.

Next, with a certitude just short of inspirational, Miss Keene makes the assumption that if the contestants' time were not occupied in such "trivial" pursuits as beauty pageants, they would be elsewhere making conquests in science and the arts. Well, maybe. But the laws of probability suggest otherwise. In a given random group, only half the constituents are likely to be possessed of above-average intelligence. Of that less generously invested, is it not more reasonable to assume that their spare time, by virtue of their interests and aptitudes, would most likely find them at Greenbelt Center discussing the merits of Jamaican booz rather than at their desks devising a formula for de-polluting the atmosphere? I think so.

Further, Miss Keene arbitrarily ascribes an intrinsic superiority to intellectual over physical excellence. Best she forbear propounding that theory to Chris Evert! — or, more to the point, Raquel Welch. Now, Miss Welch has never been accused of intellectual or artistic overkill. Yet her canny exploitation of those womanly traits which Miss Keene so fervently deplores has made her a 24-karat success — a success of such monumental, er, proportions that, were they to be honest, most women of lesser attainment would admit to envy. By belittling physical comeliness as an end unto itself, Miss Keene defeats the very cause she professes to espouse. Generally applied, her standards would condemn to a life of hopelessness and second-class status that whole group of women who happen to be less formidably endowed cerebrally than corporeally.

Finally, Miss Keene ignores one immutable, universal truth: Girls are pretty; boys aren't. Aw, gee, Miss Keene, loosen up. Don't take yourself so seriously. Relax and enjoy the pageant.

GHI Paint Problems

To the Editor:

Regarding the exterior painting on brick and masonry homes, I can understand the desire of the members to enhance the beauty of their homes by the use of various colors to get away from the "barracks look" or the "government housing look." As Mr. Breashears says, it was not necessary to paint these structures if you are only considering maintenance. But what about the looks? That is when painting becomes necessary in some people's minds.

In Berwick — where I have my summer home — there are brick and masonry homes that have been painted since the turn of the century with the proper type of paint. Because the owners have followed the correct methods, painting is only necessary about every 10 to 15 years!

Regarding the frame homes — the asbestos shingles were pre-painted when put on the building! There is a method of restoring the surface which consists of applying a resurfacer (after scraping the shingles down to the parent material — the asbestos in this case — so all oxidation is removed) and then applying the color coat.

Again in Berwick — there are homes with asbestos shingles that are 50 to 60 years old that still have the original shingles. The homeowners have never experienced chipping and peeling! However about every 10 years it is necessary to apply a resurfacer and a coat of color to keep that "looking like new" finish!

So in Berwick there are brick and masonry homes painted on the outside and also frame homes with painted asbestos shingles that look like newly built homes yet were built some 30 or 40 years before GHI was built!

No, Mr. Breashears, it wasn't the decisions of the homeowners to paint that caused the problem! If there must be a reason given, it can be attributed to the way GHI has been run — especially from the aspect of an incompetent general manager who didn't see a proper painting program and/or a set of homeowner requirements established, coupled with an unresponsive board that didn't take action when our painting troubles first started.

Because of the lack of a program, the condition of many of the frames is such that to hire a painter to properly remove all traces of paint and apply a surfacer and a color coat would be as expensive as replacing the shingles with new shingles or covering them over with aluminum siding.

So we get into the nitty gritty insofar as the frames are concerned. The individual owner will have to determine whether or not he wants a permanent solution because he plans to stay in his home for several years to come or whether or not he wants a quickie clean up job because he is planning to stay a year or two more.

However, the condition of the brick and frames isn't as appalling as the condition of the new townhouses! Already rot and mildew have set in simply because the exterior plywood sheathing hasn't been properly taken care of! Those black areas that are growing larger are where the rot and mildew have set in. If left unchecked, it will be impossible to apply a finish simply because rotten wood will not hold a finish! What should be done without further delay is to apply a coat of reconditioner and sealer and a coat of finish.

There is one incredible aspect about the painting and maintenance. We never seem to have the funds either personally or collectively as a corporation to take care of our needs, yet we spend over ONE MILLION DOLLARS every four years just to pay our bookkeepers and secretaries! Is it not time we put our money where it will do the most good?

Senior Citizens Offered Tuition-Free Courses

The Board of Trustees of Prince Georges Community College moved quickly to implement the recently enacted state legislation waiving tuition for citizens in the County above the age of 60 and has gone one step further to waive all activity, equipment, and laboratory fees, effective for the fall semester for both credit and non-credit courses.

All classes begin August 26 with final registration scheduled at Largo Campus, August 20.

Some Progress

To the Editor:

The situation concerning roadside mini-dumps seems to be improving. Retracing a route that I had previously taken, I counted 9 mini-dumps this Sunday evening, as compared to the previous dozen. This marks a 25% improvement. Just a few more conscientious citizens and a more watchful police patrol to caution roadside dumpers can clear up the situation before the Labor Day Festival weekend.

Another area, though, that can stand some attention is the dumping of newspapers at the signs around town which mention the days when newspaper collections are made. Many people take the message literally and pile their newspapers at the base of the signs, rather than keep them near their residences for pick-up. One way to eliminate this nuisance is to take down the signs, as the majority of people are now aware of this program, and to mention the newspaper collection dates now and then in the Greenbelt News Review.

The many comments that I have had from people interested in their surroundings gives me great hope that we can keep Greenbelt the type of city we are proud of.

Wage-earners Right to Life
To the Editor:

Most Greenbelt families derive their livelihoods through the current paid work of one or more members of the family. So I believe most Greenbelt families have an immediate, and vital, interest in whether, when the breadwinners go off to work in the morning they will come home again alive, uninjured and with their health unimpaired by occupational diseases or injuries.

Since early in 1971, the U.S. has had a federal program in effect, intended by Congress to eliminate the job-related accidents which yearly kill over 14,000 persons and cause several million injuries and the job-related exposures to chemicals, gases, dusts, fumes, radiations, and other agents which yearly cause hundreds of thousands of serious illnesses (HEW has said 300,000 deaths from such illnesses, but no one really knows how many). This program is the 1970-passed Occupational Safety & Health Act.

The program has not been carried out as well as one would like, but there has been an improvement in employers' efforts to provide for health and safety on the job—because of OSHA.

On June 27, during the House of Representatives' action on the Fiscal Year 1975 Appropriations bill for the Labor and HEW Depts. and related agencies, a number of employer-sponsored amendments to cripple or kill the OSHA program were moved and voted upon. A couple were approved, the others were beaten back.

Greenbelters should know that on each one of the crippling or killer amendments against OSHA, Reps. Larry Hogan and Marjorie Holt voted for the amendment. This is not a political partisan issue necessarily, because on each of these amendments Rep. Gilbert Gude voted against the amendment—and all three of them, the two from Prince Georges County and the one from Montgomery County, are Republicans. (On May 7, the U. S. Senate rejected, by tabling, a complex anti-OSHA amendment, and both Maryland GOP Senators voted against the amendment. It seems only PG Marylanders are so thoroughly anti-wage-earners.)

Hogan and Holt voted for cutting $30 million from the OSHA budget, for earmarking $5 million of an inadequate OSHA budget for grants to states to conduct on-site advisory consultation for employers (a thorny and complex subject the legislative committee is studying and inappropriate for handling without study by the fund-appropriating route), for forbidding safety and health inspections of shops with fewer than 26 employees (these small shops are more hazardous than larger ones and include 30% of all covered employees), and—unbelievable though it seems—for wiping out the entire OSHA appropriation (!). Mr. Hogan makes a big thing about his support of the "Right to Life" but this Right to Life doesn't, in his mind, extend to wage-earners.

The Police Blotter

A nude male with long brown hair and beard was reported standing on the edge of Braden field. The area was checked by police; however, he was gone.

The department is also investigating a report of an attack on a child by a male adult that took place in the wooded area across from the fire house.

Over $3000 was reported missing after two young men were observed leaving the office of the Drug Fair at Beltway Plaza during working hours. The Plaza had another unpleasant incident when four persons were apprehended in a car and charged with being in possession of marijuana. One suspect attacked the officer attempting to deal with them.

Three members of the Greenbelt Police Department were awarded degrees at the U. of Maryland. PFC Robert A. Smith was awarded a BA in Criminology, and Lt. John Krob and Cpl. Phillip Coombes received Associate degrees in Law Enforcement.

Boat Patrol Effective At 4th Celebration

by Elaine Skolnik

It was a safe and happy fourth of July for Greenbelters who remained in town to enjoy the city's many special holiday events. The spectacular fireworks display which, in keeping with Greenbelt's unblemished record, went off without any mishaps, brought an estimated 35,000 persons to the lake-park. The swimming pool hosted a record number of happy bathers, and the concert and sports events were well attended.

A new aspect of the celebration was a boat patrol on duty from 8 a.m. until festivities ended. According to city manager James K. Giese, such a patrol will be a permanent feature during future celebrations. A tragedy was narrowly averted this year when officers in the boat pulled an exhausted young man from the water midway across the lake. The incident occurred during the fireworks display, and the youth could have drowned in the darkness, with spectators' attention focused on the aerial display.

During the day, the boat patrol ordered 35 boats to leave the lake for failing to display proper city registration. Over 50 juveniles were warned against swimming in the lake and, while many became quite indignant, no real problems arose.

Giese said that the traffic was handled well, and there were no problems in overseeing the large crowds, with the exception of routine delays at the end of the display.

Another highlight of the day was the dedication by Mayor Richard Pilski, assisted by Miss Greenbelt of 1973, Kim Nicholson, of the newly renovated horseshoe courts adjacent to Candy Cane City. An exhibition between the Maryland State Horseshoe Champions took place to inaugurate the opening of the new courts.

The city crews were all involved in a variety of chores in preparation for the fourth, such as setting up and firing the fireworks. Last Friday their time was devoted to clean-up activities.

CITY NOTES

Last week the general crew installed new benches in the shopping center. They also recently finished laying sod around the newly paved walk from Fayette Place to the park between Lakewood and Northway. In addition, work was done in conjunction with the construction of the new tennis courts at Braden Field. Straw was received and silt sediment control dykes were made.

The special detail crew has started the street marking program and painted various safety zones on the streets. Sign work has also been performed.

The park crew planted azaleas, junipers and pyracanthas, as well as some annuals in the public green between the Medical Building and post office.

The refuse crew operated with a manpower shortage last week, but with the help of other crew members were on schedule. All three loadpackers are now back in service.

The stock pile of aluminum collected last week amounted to 267 lbs. which, at the new increased price of 15 cents a pound, realized $40.05. A 5,600 pound load of crushed glass was recently taken to Baltimore.

The Youth Center gym light covers were finally received intact (the fifth shipment since March) and installed, and the new trampoline has arrived.

Our Surroundings

by Stephen Polaschik

A positive note seems to be due in this column. Therefore, attention is being focused on a few of our neighbors who are doing constructive things to improve our surroundings. The list will not be inclusive as it is based merely on a few personal observations. I would like to hear about others in Greenbelt who are doing things in their own quiet way to make living in Greenbelt more pleasant. They deserve our attention, as their work can be an inspiration for all of us.

Starting from near my home, we commend Mrs. Kelly of the 9 Court of Ridge who has transformed a barren dumping ground beneath a tree into a pleasant grass plot with plantings at the base of the tree. Most people in the area appreciate her efforts, but unfortunately, there are a few despilers.

Mrs. Kaighn of 8 Court Southway and some of her neighbors have changed an ordinary grassy bank at the court entrance into a multi-colored flower attraction. Their efforts merit your glance as you go out Southway. Also note some of the colorful plantings of residents within the court.

The city grounds staff deserves credit for its continuing attention to the Southway traffic island flower plots which have a continuing change of plants during the growing season. Neighbors in the area also get our nod of appreciation for keeping the roadway and roadsides clear.

Mrs. Sari Shireen has brought up an interesting suggestion for helping to keep our Lake Park clean. Her basic suggestion, with some embellishment by me, is that at the start of the school year, the city or some civic organization sponsor a poster drawing contest for participation by all Greenbelt elementary school children. The theme would be: "We welcome visitors to our park, but we need your help to keep it clean." It seems to be a good idea which should be implemented by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Lions Club, PTSAs, the City, or jointly by a number of organizations. Perhaps it can even be incorporated as an event in the Labor Day Festival. After winners are chosen, a few winning posters could be copied on permanent signs and placed around the lake area each year.

Berkofsky Cuts Record

Former Greenbelter, now concert pianist, Martin Berkofsky recently cut a record for the Angel label with the London Symphony, Concerto for Two Pianos and Orchestra by Max Bruch. The other pianist was Nathan Twining. The reverse side of the record has eight short pieces by Bruch played by Berkofsky.

Berkofsky and Twining found the manuscript for this Concerto at an auction in Baltimore. This performance was its first in its original form.

Berkofsky grew up in Greenbelt attending Center School, Greenbelt Junior High, and High Point.

After graduation he studied at the Peabody Institute and at the Vienna Academy. At present he is living on Long Island.

Cub Scout Pack 746

Cub Scout Pack 746 held their last meeting before the summer recess in the Mowatt Amphitheatre on June 14. Reports on the month's activities were made for the Webelos den by Travis Don-Bullian, Christopher Hunt and Scott Hicks and for Den 1 by Travis Moss and Christopher Haynes.

A one year pin was awarded R. L. England while Bear badges and arrowpoints were awarded Kevin Weiner, Douglas Haynes, and Douglas Neumann. Ira Krowitz received his Wolf badge while John Jordan was given two arrowpoints.

Numerous Webelos activity badges were presented to Scott Anderson, Lyle Rice, Travis Don-Bullian and Scott Hicks. Cubmaster Stephen Sinden then conducted a candlelit Bobcat induction of Christopher Haynes, with all the cubs assisting. Sinden followed this by presenting tokens of appreciation to Mrs. Brian Moss, Mrs. George Neumann and Mrs. Howard Hunt, den leaders; Ronald England, Webelos leader and Mrs. Albert Rice, Awards chairlady. He was surprised by a service award presented by Ralph Noble, Assistant District Commissioner, on behalf of Pack 746.

Four Webelos scouts, Scott Hicks, Christopher Hunt, Travis Don-Bullian and Scott Anderson, were graduated into Scout Troop 746 after receiving the highest Cub Award, the Arrow of Light. Rev.

Kenneth Bunker gave the Cubmaster's Moment before lemonade and cookies concluded a colorful evening.

Tax Relief for Renters

Legislation has been sent to the Prince Georges County Council to establish a rent relief system for disabled persons and senior citizens on fixed incomes.

County Executive William W. Gullett unveiled his proposal May 31, saying he felt it would "correct longstanding discrimination against our senior and disabled citizens who for various reasons have not been able to become homeowners." He estimated the program would cost slightly more than a million dollars a year. County law now provides tax credits on the basis of age and income or disability to homeowners.

Applicants for the rent relief, which would be paid directly to the citizen by the county government, would have to be 65 years old by July 1 of the year following the one for which they are seeking the stipend. Persons under 65 considered totally disabled under the Social Security Act, or Railroad Retirement Act would be eligible for the grant. If a claimant cannot prove disability via a government or public agency, other proof would have to be submitted to the county government for approval.

The claimant must have occupied the rental property for at least three months of the year involved. Only one person per household would be eligible for the grant.

Summertime Greenbelt

by Mary Lou Williamson

"Forty-five's Finest Hour" — that's what Abe Chasnof called it when he presented Glenn and Ginger Williams with the "Magnolia Award" the next day. The phrase was echoed on smiling faces around the court parking lot as chairs and picnic tables were hauled out and the last remains of a big party tossed in trash cans.

Some seventy friends and neighbors of 45 court Ridge Rd. had gathered the night before for a pot-luck dinner—keeping a watchful eye on the clouds, many wondering out loud how far the party would get before the rain hit. John Mongelli said it was raining when he came through the District on his way home from work.

Piece by piece picnic tables and chairs were set up; table cloths, flowers and Japanese lanterns for decoration, and by 6:15 people with pots of food began arriving — too slowly at first — then three or four rolls of thunder sent Glenn scurrying to cover the sound equipment with plastic sheets.

But by 7 p.m. the throng had gathered and the court was full of the sounds of partying. Almost everyone in the court was there.

Invited guests included families who had lived in the 45 court but had since moved — Janet and Izzy Parker, the Weintraubs, Lucretia and George Pope, Margaret and David Thomas, the Skolniks. It was fun to reminisce.

The food tables were magnificent — each item a house specialty: fried chicken, brisket of beef, ham, stuffed cabbage leaves, a multitude of salads, home baked bread, home made jelly from hand-picked mountain blackberries, and for dessert? You guessed it, cherry pie, ice cream and watermelon.

And as if that wasn't enough — the party goers were treated to an evening of music by 45 court's newest members, Glenn and Ginger. They sang and played the best songs of the last ten years, some "oldies" (requests) and a number of songs they have written this past year while on the road. Songs of love, one written about their 6-year-old neighbor, Margaret, who comes often to visit, one thinking to the future and their "First Child," and "I'll Give My Love to You" — a beautiful love song — and the audience loved them all. Many danced, some together and some alone (especially the 9 and under crowd), some just sat and listened, a few were still eating (the watermelon had arrived late).

Lee Beall's father, Mickey, charmed the listeners with "Danny Boy" and "When Irish Eyes Are Smilin'." Glenn's brother, Larry, visiting, took several turns at the electric piano, once to accompany Glenn as he played "Misty" on the saxophone.

At 10 p.m. a Greenbelt police car arrived to remind the revelers that others in the area were trying to sleep and please to turn down the sound.

The last request of the evening for the "Hora" saw a large circle of dancers and Abe Chasnof singing "Hava Ne Gelia" with accompaniment by Glenn.

The party officially ended at 11 p.m. when the music stopped, food was put away and Sid Barnett called out the garbage detail. Strains of barbershop harmony emerged from one corner and the murmur of voices from people having too good a time to leave could be heard for several more hours. The realization that it didn't rain at all didn't come until the next day.

Emphasis is on immediate and effective response to suicidal and crisis situations, but they also give direct information, suggest referrals to treatment facilities, and supportive help in less urgent difficulties.

Lee Beall's father, Mickey, charmed the listeners with "Danny Boy" and "When Irish Eyes Are Smilin'." Glenn's brother, Larry, visiting, took several turns at the electric piano, once to accompany Glenn as he played "Misty" on the saxophone.

At 10 p.m. a Greenbelt police car arrived to remind the revelers that others in the area were trying to sleep and please to turn down the sound.

The last request of the evening for the "Hora" saw a large circle of dancers and Abe Chasnof singing "Hava Ne Gelia" with accompaniment by Glenn.

The party officially ended at 11 p.m. when the music stopped, food was put away and Sid Barnett called out the garbage detail. Strains of barbershop harmony emerged from one corner and the murmur of voices from people having too good a time to leave could be heard for several more hours. The realization that it didn't rain at all didn't come until the next day.

"With inflation, I have to economize.
Why can't PEPCO tighten its belt and keep rates down?"

Eric Ward
Rockville, Md.

Our fight against inflation probably is a lot like yours, Mr. Ward. Belt tightening's always been a full-time job with us. What are we doing? I'll start with fuel, simply because it represents the lion's share of our operating budget. Thanks to long-term Venezuelan contracts negotiated several years ago, we're still paying comparatively favorable prices for our basic fuel oil. Even so, our fuel oil costs have tripled since January, 1973. Today we're turning to coal as a less expensive alternative. But coal isn't exactly a bargain, either. Our coal costs have more than doubled in the same period. Deliveries are difficult because we're faced with a railroad coal car shortage. We're buying 160 coal cars for our own use and, once in operation, they'll help pay for themselves through reduced freight rates. And we're negotiating with the railroads that deliver fuel to our generating stations, trying to improve schedules and reduce delivery costs.

We're not stopping there. We maintain careful control over our operating expenditures, from multimillion dollar equipment purchases all the way down to office supplies. So if the battle against inflation seems all uphill to you, Mr. Ward, we understand. It's our common problem.
